

Authors' Biographies

---

Raia Apostolova is a PhD candidate in the Sociology and Social Anthropology Department at the Central European University in Budapest. She engages with the historical and theoretical interaction between migratory categories in late capitalism and the political/economic migrant dichotomy in liberal democracies.

Fazila Bhimji is a senior lecturer in the school of Humanities and Social Sciences at the University of Central Lancashire. Her current research interests include refugees and immigrant activism and agency, citizenship and belonging and asylum politics and policies.

Juraj Buzalka is an associate professor of social anthropology at the Faculty of Social and Economic Sciences of Comenius University in Bratislava. His research interests are anthropology of political movements, politics of memory and social transformations.

Celine Cantat is a Visiting Research Fellow at the Centre for Policy Studies at the Central European University. Her work focuses on migrant solidarity movements in Hungary and Central Europe and their relation to the European political project and its border regime. Before starting at CPS, Celine completed her PhD in Refugee Studies at the Centre for Research on Migration, Refugees and Belonging at the University of East London, and spent a year at Migrinter, Université de Poitiers, as an INTEGRIM Marie Curie Early Stage Researcher.

Didem Başak Ergün holds a BS degree in Political Science and an MS degree in Gender and Women Studies from Middle East Technical University in Turkey. She is currently a PhD candidate at the ELTE Media, Film and Cultural Studies working on her dissertation titled “Cultural Anxieties on the Screen: Cinematic Negotiation of Identity in Turkish Cinema”.

Ulrike Hamann is a post-doctoral assistant in the Department of Diversity and Social Conflict at the Institute of Social Sciences of Humboldt University and a member of the Berlin Institute of Migration and Integration Research at the same institution. Her research areas are migration, gender, urban politics and post-colonialism. She finished her PhD at the Goethe University of Frankfurt in Political Sciences/Postcolonial Studies. She is a member of INURA, kritnet, rc21 and is currently preparing an international summer university on transformations of societies of migration in Berlin 2017.

Annastiina Kallius is a doctoral student at the Department of Social and Cultural Anthropology at the University of Helsinki. Her research addresses questions of citizenship, borders, and migration. She has extensive experience as an activist in the field of migration and asylum in the region.

Authors' Biographies

---

Réka Zsuzsánna Máthé is a PhD student at the National University of Public Service, Budapest, Hungary. She earned her master's degree in Management of Public Institutions and Non-Governmental Organizations offered through a program of Babes-Bolyai University and Michigan State University. Her research focuses on public policies related to the civil society. Concurrently, she is furthering her studies in European public administration and policies at College of Europe in Belgium.

Attila Melegh is a sociologist, economist and historian. He has taught in the United States, Russia, Georgia and Hungary. He is Associate Professor at Corvinus University, Budapest, and a Senior Researcher at the Demographic Research Institute. His research focuses on the global history of social change in the 20th century, and international migration. He is the author of three books and more than a hundred scholarly publications. On the East-West Slope. Globalization, nationalism, racism and discourses on Central and Eastern Europe was published by Central European University Press in 2006. He is the founding director of the Karl Polányi Research Center at Corvinus University, and also president of the European Network in Universal and Global History

Zsófia Nagy is a PhD student and assistant lecturer at the Faculty of Social Sciences, Eötvös Loránd University, Budapest. She received her Master's Degree at Central European University, Budapest in 2014. Her research interests include sociology of migration, digital sociology, and political sociology.

Brigitta Noé is a PhD student at the Institute of Sociology and Social Policy, Corvinus University of Budapest. She received her BA and MA degree in sociology at CUB as well. Her particular interest is in gender relations in the CEE countries and elite research. Her doctoral research addresses the gender gap in the public support for EU integration in the CEE countries. is a PhD student at the Institute of Sociology and Social Policy of Corvinus University in Budapest.

Prem Kumar Rajaram is Associate Professor of Sociology and Social Anthropology at Central European University. His work is on the government and exclusions experienced by refugees and other populations. He is the author of Ruling the Margins: Administrative Rule and Colonial Power in the Past and Present (New York: Routledge, 2015) and co-editor of Borderscapes: Hidden Geographies and Politics at Territory's Edge (Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 2007).