

Authors' Biographies

---

András Éger is currently a PhD student at the Doctoral School of Sociology at Corvinus University of Budapest. His main research interest includes labour migration, labour market integration of migrants and migrant network analysis.

Beáta Huszka is assistant professor at the Department of European Studies of ELTE U., Budapest; she completed her Ph.D. in international relations at the Central European U. in 2010; from 2013 to 2017 was leading work package six of FRAME Fostering Human Rights Among European Policies, a large-scale, collaborative research project funded under the EU's Seventh Framework Programme. She is the author of the book 'Secessionist Movements and Ethnic Conflict - The Development and Impact of Nationalist Rhetoric' published by Routledge in 2014.

Islam Jusufi, PhD, is currently Lecturer and Head of the Department of Political Sciences and International Relations at Epoka University, Tirana, Albania. He served as adviser to the President of Macedonia and to the European Union. He held fellowships at the Wilson Centre, Washington DC; EU Institute for Security Studies, Paris; ERSTE Stiftung, Vienna; Centre for Policy Studies, Budapest; and NATO, Brussels. His main research interests includes international, European and Balkan politics and security studies.

Adnan Kadribašić is a legal adviser and a human rights specialist. His main research interest includes human rights, gender equality, discrimination and rule of law development in countries in transition.

Zsolt Körtvélyesi (S.J.D., CEU; LL.M., Harvard) is assistant lecturer at the Department for European Studies of the ELTE Social Science Faculty, and junior researcher at the Institute for Legal Studies, Centre for Social Sciences of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. His main research interests include human rights, comparative constitutional law, citizenship and minority protection.

Marek Mikuš (PhD - LSE, 2014) is a social anthropologist working on social, economic and political transformation in former Yugoslavia, in particular Croatia and Serbia. His current research project as part of the Research Group Financialisation at the Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology (Halle, Germany) examines the boom, crisis, and ongoing social and political repercussions of household debt in Croatia since the 1990s. His research interests include economic and political anthropology, civil society, development, neoliberalism, public policy and the state.

Zsolt Zódi PhD is an associate professor in Corvinus University of Budapest, and research fellow at the Hungarian Academy of Sciences Centre for Social Sciences Legal Studies Institute. His main research areas are legal theory with a focus on judiciary, and regulatory issues of the information society.